There are lots of elderly people who live alone. Sometimes they need help and attention. So, they must be taken care of.

I see two main ways of helping such people. First of all, younger generation can come to elderly men and women, speak with them, help with housework and shopping. But there are few people who are ready to do that for free.

Fortunately, modern technologies are available now. Fujitsu, the Japanese electronics company, is ready to protect elderly people by examining their houses with special microphones. On the one hand, they are really effective. On the other hand, such technologies are very expensive and most families cannot afford them.

In the conclusion, I would say that younger generation should remember their parents and take care of them without any technologies.
