Nowadays some parents teach their children at home rather than sending them to school. That's why many people <sup>argue</sup> ~~discuss~~ <sup>about</sup> if home studying is really that better for children. To find the answer to this question we'd better think of some pros and cons of home education.

<sup>coh.</sup> On one hand, studying at home children stay in a comfortable zone. They don't have to wake up early, ~~what~~ and leave their house <sup>coh</sup> what gives them an opportunity to get ready for studying in <sup>gr</sup> emotional and physical way. Moreover, children that study at home have their parent as a teacher. That's the reason why children have a teacher that encourages them and <sup>sp</sup> explains anything they don't understand.

On the other hand, studying at home children don't communicate with other people so much. ~~That's why~~ That's why they can face <sup>gr</sup> with a difficulty <sup>Besides that</sup> of making friends or getting along with people in general. At home children are used to <sup>gr</sup> be alone during studying, so ~~a~~ many noises in a ~~space~~ room <sup>may</sup> can make it harder <sup>sp</sup> might be a problem for them, to concentrate on the task.

According to presented arguments, we can point out some advantages and disadvantages of home education. However, in my personal opinion, studying at school is much <sup>gr</sup> more better than at home. School environment <sup>teaches</sup> ~~teaches~~ you both to chat with people and to get over different obstacles in your life. This way you can be well prepared for your future.
